Guidelines on Getting Out

A guide to help you transition successfully back to your community

Fall 2023

Rebuilding Your Life

The transition to life is a big challenge, and this brochure is designed to help you through this exciting but often difficult time. If you take to heart the following suggestions we think these resources can help you to rebuild successfully.

- Do your homework. Make as many arrangements for yourself as you can before you get out. Use this brochure to write to agencies for help.
- Give yourself time to adjust. Don't try to accomplish everything right away. Take time alone or with family and close friends only. Be patient with yourself and know it might take you a while to reach your goals. You may feel depressed or overwhelmed. This is normal - just take some time to heal.
- Ask for help. There is an answer to every question you have. All you need to do is ask. This does not make you weak, it makes you smart. Call the agencies in this pamphlet. If they can't help you, ask them who can. Keep asking until you get the right answer.

Some Tips on Getting Started

This pamphlet is intended to help you begin the process of re-entering the community. It outlines positive steps you can take both before and after your discharge .

Most agencies have criteria to determine who is eligible for their programs, so you can't just show up and expect them to accommodate you. It's best to write them before your release to find out their requirements. (A sample housing letter is included on page 21.) All agencies listed will accept ex-offenders. However, they may have some restrictions on types of offenses. Listed programs do not accept sex offenders unless the program description specifically states that it accepts sex offenders. Find the type of agency that fits your situation and special needs. Don't waste your time writing to a program that can't help you. Prepare yourself mentally for the possibility of a short term emergency shelter stay. (You no longer need a TB card for admission to Pima County shelters.)

Information included in this pamphlet will help you with places to find help with transportation, employment assistance, job search tactics, health care, individual and family support, and other special programs.

If you are being paroled, remember to make immediate contact with the parole office and follow all parole conditions completely. They will also give you information about health care (AHCCCS) and food stamps available through the Arizona Department of Economic Security (DES). You can apply for all benefits available to you, as well as receive job search assistance, and in some cases training, through DES, so be sure to visit a local DES office or apply online as soon as possible. You will need AHCCCS for many of the health, behavioral health, and substance abuse services listed here. If you are a Native American, you may also apply for tribal services.

Today a lot of information is available online. Contact your local library for information about free computer access and instruction on using the Internet.

Additional Information

Mailing Address

After your release, you can have mail forwarded to you at:

The Primavera Foundation

4550 S. Palo Verde Rd.
Tucson, AZ 85713
(520) 740-1501, ask for the Community Ministries.

Service Referrals

- If you are released from the Pima County Adult Detention Complex, you can be connected to different kinds of services, including housing assistance, medical care and drug treatment at:

The Transition Center

Hours: 8 a.m. to midnight; M-F
1204 W. Silverlake Rd.
Tucson, AZ 85713

(520) 724-2465

- Non-violent drug conviction - 2006
- Fraudulent schemes - 2005
- DUIs - 2005, 2008

If you feel comfortable it is recommended that you include an additional comment. These are a few examples (try to make sure they are connected with how you've made personal changes since your conviction).

- Since then I've completed _____(certificate, sobriety programs, job assignments, volunteered).
- I have been sober for over _____.
- I am committed to living an honest life.
- I am not proud of the choice I made during that time in my life but since then, I have _____.
- I put it behind me and redirected my life.
- My goal is to help others avoid the mistake I made.
- Since then, I've reunited with my family and want to be a better parent.
- I now make healthy choices and have healthy relationships.

Avoid using words like "aggravated" or "dangerous". These words are interpreted as violent and may be taken out of context.

The only letter that should accompany an application is a cover letter (if the position requires one), letters of recommendation, and reference letters. Do not write a letter explaining your felony conviction(s).

The Application Form

The application form is the most important part of the process. It is how you make your first impression with an employer. Save time by completing one generic application and take that application with you to use as a guide to fill out each new application. If the application asks if you have been convicted of a felony/misdemeanor, answer yes. It is no longer advised to write will explain during interview.

Employers recommend and often require answering the felony question with facts about your conviction. Please note if the felony question asks "Have you ever been convicted of a felony/misdemeanor" they want ALL of them disclosed. If the question asks "Have you been convicted of a felony within the last 7 years" and your conviction was 8 years ago the answer would be NO.

AVOID

- Rushing through the application
- Sloppy penmanship
- Employment gaps-blanks from when you were in prison
- Appearing desperate; for example "Position Desired: Anything"
- Brief descriptions of your job duties
- Leaving blanks on the application

INSTEAD

- Read the application completely before starting
- Take time to print neatly and clearly
- Show the work experience while you were incarcerated
- Use a specific job goal, for example: "Position Desired - A full time position where I can offer my skills in adapting and repairing tools, machinery, and equipment"
- Be descriptive when writing about your job duties and skills
- Wages earned while incarcerated always write minimum.
- Under desired salary always put open or negotiable, never write a dollar amount
- Make sure you have correct phone numbers of previous employers and references
- Complete all spaces on the application where information is requested, including NA if it is not applicable

Tips for Finding a Job

If you work hard on your skills and your job search, you will find work – even if it takes longer than you expected. Help with your job search, and in some cases training, is available at the Arizona @ Work (One Stop) Career Centers (page 17). They offer the use of phones, faxes, and computers. Keep a log of all the places you applied, including visits made in person, initial phone calls, and follow up phone calls.

Tax Benefits for Employers Who Hire Ex-Felons

You may be able to encourage someone to hire you by telling him or her of the tax benefits available – through the Federal Work Opportunity Tax Credit (WOTC) – to employers who hire ex-felons within one year after their conviction or release from prison.

The WOTC can reduce an employer's federal income tax liability by as much as $9,600 per employee hired.

The WOTC encourages employers to hire individuals from eligible groups that have significant barriers to employment, including ex-felons by reducing employers' federal income taxes. Eligible groups include:

- veterans
- ex-felons
- residents of designated communities
- people referred by vocational rehabilitation agencies
- Summer Youth Employees
- Recipients of TANF, SNAP (food stamps), Supplemental Security Income, and qualified long-term unemployment

Copies of all forms needed are available at the following address:

American Friends Service Committee, 103 N. Park Ave., Suite 111, Tucson, AZ 85705.

Prepare to Discuss Your Background

It is always necessary to be honest about your conviction(s) when completing employment applications. For example, if your age and lifestyle were factors in the crime, you may choose to discuss this with honesty either on your application or during your interview. If your life is different now explain the positive changes. Make sure you mention all the job related activities while incarcerated and any activities you feel could make a good impression with employers. Some examples:

- Job related skills or job training before, during, or after your incarceration
- Any positive work evaluations, duties assigned that involved responsibility, any training you conducted or supervisory activities you carried out
- Any educational activities completed-GED, college credits, vocational training
- Any other rehabilitation (life skill classes, personal development classes, religious activities, NA/AA, drug counseling-only if related to your conviction)

Here are some examples you could use when answering the felony conviction question. (Remember: These examples should be tailored to you and your circumstances.)

Independent Housing

Tips for the Housing Application Process

Most places ask you to complete an application and perhaps have an interview. You may be asked certain background questions, including a question about felony conviction. To prepare for the application and interview process, do the following:

- Bring along your parole officer's contact information
- Bring proof of current employment
- Arrange for 2-3 people to be your personal references. These should be people who know and who can speak well of you. You may need to provide their contact information to the apartment manager. Speak to these people in advance so that they are prepared to receive a call about you.

Low-Cost Housing Search Tools

You can find a low cost housing list online that is updated every two weeks at pimacountyhousingsearch.org. You can access a computer and get help using it at any Pima County library.

You can also find assistance with locating affordable housing at the Pima County Housing Center, sometimes called El Banco (means bank) for its location in a former bank building at 801 W. Congress, Tucson, AZ 85745. Phone: (520) 724-2460

The Tucson Crime-Free Multi-Housing Program

In your search for housing, you may hear property managers and landlords mention that they are part of the Tucson Crime Free Multi-Housing Program. These properties may or may not have signs posted. They may not rent to you once they find out that you have a felony record. Acceptance of your application for renting at these properties will depend on the crime that was committed. Many properties, whether or not they participate in the Crime Free Program, may not accept your application. Please ask prior to paying application fee. There is no legal way that we know of to challenge this policy, so we recommend that you search elsewhere for housing.

Identification

The majority of releasing inmates are offered the opportunity to obtain a replacement Driver's License or State Identification Card prior to release. For those who either are ineligible or choose to not participate in the pre-release program, an ADC ID card is issued at release.

Ex-offenders can get an Arizona State ID card from any Arizona Motor Vehicle Division (MVD) office within 15 calendar days of their release using only the affidavit of incarceration ID for a fee of $12. Not applying for a Arizona State ID within the 15 calendar days from your release will result in needing to provide two other forms of verification! If you are age 65 or older and apply within the required 15 calendar days, the fee is waived. If you need to talk to someone at the MVD about an Arizona ID or driver's license, phone the appropriate number below:

Reducing Overdose Risk

You can use any drug safely, including fentanyl and its analogues, as long as you have the right resources.

Use slow and use less. A little goes a long way with fentanyl (compared to heroin) and overdoses can occur quickly, sometimes before a person has finished injecting the dose.

Try snorting or smoking instead of injecting. Injecting carries the highest risk for overdose, so shifting to snorting or smoking may help reduce risk. A person can still overdose by smoking or snorting, especially with fentanyl, so start slow.

Space out doses. Take time between doses because fentanyl acts fast and is different for everyone, depending on dose and tolerance.

Practice extra caution when using alone. We're safer together, but it's not always possible to be with a friend you trust. Try to have someone you know check on you if you have to use alone so they can intervene in the event of an overdose.

In a group? Stagger your use. Make sure someone is always alert and that at least one person has naloxone on them.

Test it. Knowing what's in drugs can help with the decision of how much and how best to use them.

Always carry naloxone. Be familiar with the signs of an overdose and be prepared to respond with naloxone.

Listen to your body. Overall health impacts overdose risk. Hydrate, eat, and rest as much as possible.

Counseling & Support (No AHCCCS)

If you do not qualify for AHCCCS, you can find help with behavioral health and substance abuse issues through free or low-cost services such as those listed below.

Please note that although some of these service providers also offer services covered by AHCCCS, this is not a comprehensive list of area behavioral health providers. AZCH (see page 7) assists behavioral health consumers with AHCCCS in accessing appropriate services.

Please read carefully. Providers of more than one service are listed only once. For more information on specialized counseling/support also see Domestic Violence, page 15, and Family Matters, page 25.
